3 Myths About Becoming An Interior Designer

INTERIOR DESIGNER'S BUSINESS SCHOOL

It is Too Hard To Be An Interior Designer

It is no harder to work as an interior designer than it is in any other profession in the construction industry. But it can definitely be more fun!

1

You Need A Portfolio To Get Clients

We are living in a very fast-paced world, so portfolios are often outdated and can portray the wrong image of your abilities as a designer. Therefore a portfolio is not the best way to get clients.

2

You Have To Be Naturally Talented

Talent is not required to succeed, as you can learn the skills to undertake the role. The main thing you will need above everything else, however, is a passion and interest in interior design.
